

Jason T. Browning, Of Counsel

Professional Experience

Jason Browning is a litigator with vast experience serving as counsel for physicians, hospitals and medical clinics in medical negligence, and professional and medical liability, as well as advising clients on HIPAA compliance, quality assurance and risk management. He also engages in commercial litigation, complex products liability matters, medical equipment utilization concerns and transportation (trucking) litigation.

Additionally, he is a certified expert agent advisor with the Major League Baseball Players Association (MLBPA) and provides counsel to Major League Baseball players and player agents on all aspects of baseball. As a certified expert agent advisor with the Major League Baseball Players Association, he advises clients on player salaries and negotiations with the Clubs, and represents players through the salary arbitration process as well as fee grievances between agents.

His recent experience includes:

- Obtaining multiple dismissals by dispositive motion practice for hospitals on claims involving negligent physician credentialing and retention claims;
- Successfully obtaining defense verdicts for medical providers;
- Success in declaring a Cuban national professional baseball player a free agent, allowing the player to negotiate with all 30 member MLB Clubs;
- Representation of player agent in a fee grievance against former MLB All-Star before an independent arbitration tribunal within the jurisdiction of the MLBPA; and
- Counsel to players and player agents through salary arbitration process.
